Shortly after getting the BioNTech-Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine, Tiffany Dover a head nurse at Chattanooga, Tennessee hospital fainted while talking to the press about it.

Tiffany, who is a nurse manager at CHI Memorial Hospital, received the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine on Thursday. Seventeen minutes later, she suddenly fainted while giving a press brief about the process. The scary moment was caught on camera and it quickly circulated the web.

However, doctors claimed that the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine ingredients had nothing to do with the episode. Tiffany later added that she has a condition that causes her to faint sometimes when she feels pain. According to the station, Tiffany said: "It just hit me all of a sudden, I could feel it coming on. I felt a little disoriented but I feel fine now, and the pain in my arm is gone," doubts from the public about the vaccine treatment, especially with all the conspiracy theories and fake news. Nonetheless, Health officials all over the U.S. approved the distribution of the vaccine and are confident about it. $\triangleright \times$ the inoculation will soon be Vice President Mike Pence as announced on Wednesday by the White House. Pence and first lady Karen Pence will publicly receive the vaccine on a 'promotion campaign' to prove its efficacy and safety. Surgeon General Jerome Adams is also said to follow the same line at the White House later.

U.S. officials are also getting the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine. The highest-profile recipient of
